

Investing in ergonomics is a wise business decision

There are many benefits to building an ergonomic office, and ensuring that everything from the chairs to the desks and computers are the right configuration and size to keep backs from tightening and necks from becoming stiff. In fact, studies have shown that integrating ergonomics into the workplace reduces workers' time off, lowers health care costs, improves productivity, results in fewer workers' compensation claims, and leads to happier employees. With so many proven benefits, shouldn't integrating ergonomics be an objective for your organization? The cost to create an ergonomic work environment is quickly recovered from the many savings it provides.

No office environment is too big or too small for the ergonomic professionals at Simcoe Office Products to tackle. From self-employed people who work out of their home to large corporations with hundreds of employees, paying attention to office ergonomics will enhance any sized business.

At Simcoe Office Products, they will review the current office configuration and recommend ergonomic adjustments that can improve the health and well-being of employees. From shifting a keyboard tray and adjusting the height of a chair, to turning a computer monitor and lowering the arms on a kitchen stool. There is a lot that goes into good ergonomics, and Simcoe Office Products and Design is available to help. The company steers their clients to better ergonomics and employee health, and helps customers spend their money wisely.
